... From the Principal's Desk

Help your child succeed in school:
Build the habit of good attendance

GOAL:  Every student will attend school at least 90% of the time.

A missed school day is a lost opportunity for students to learn. There is a direct correlation between students who attend school regularly and higher academic achievement levels.

Even as children grow older and more independent, families play a key role in making sure students get to school safely every day and understand why attendance is so important for success in school and on the job.

Attending school regularly helps children feel better about school—and themselves. Start building this habit in preschool so they learn right away that going to school on time, every day is important. Good attendance will help children do well in high school, college and at work.

Thanks! Curt Schmidt, Principal

*Happy
Valentine's Day*

Beginning February 29th through March 4th, Health classes will be doing MFA classes in CPR and First Aid. For now, enjoy winter activities.

Winter sports can help you burn calories, increase your cardiovascular fitness, and strengthen muscles. Activities that are weight-bearing (like cross-country skiing or skating) help build stronger and denser bones. If we ever see snow, then snow shoeing is a fun way to get out in the woods and be active with friends. Fluids and good nutrition are essential for both sports activities and healthy growth. Juice, water, and soup are great ways to get fluids in. But avoid caffeinated drinks, which won't hydrate you as well. Breakfast, or at least a snack bar or fruit or string cheese will aid in avoiding the midmorning headaches and tiredness. We do serve breakfast here at school.

Being outdoors and getting exercise are great for your mental health. Exercise boosts mood, and our increasing sunlight seems to help beat back the winter blues. Dress in layers for changing conditions, use sunblock on bright days, and always keep a hat and gloves along for windy conditions that increase the chill. Choosing footwear that matches the conditions is ideal. If you do wear non-winter shoes, then walk carefully and use cleats during slick conditions to avoid injuries.

People who stay out in the cold too long may risk frostbite and hypothermia. With frostbite, your body tissue literally freezes. Frostbite is fairly rare in teens' everyday outdoor activities, but if your ears, toes, or fingers feel really cold, get out of the cold. Hand warmers are helpful to avoid frostbite, but may cause burns when skin is numb from cold so warm water or armpits are safer ways for rewarming. If the discomfort or tingling doesn't go away after a half hour or so, it's time to call a doctor.

Whether you travel by snowshoe, car, or snowmobile, it's always a good idea to let someone know where you're going and when you expect to be back. Don't go solo – take along a buddy who can go for help if there's trouble. Take a locator beacon or fully charged phone. Carry extra clothes, especially hats, gloves, and socks. Whatever vehicle you use, should have an emergency kit containing flares, blanket, flashlight that works, small first aid kit, packaged finger foods, matches, candle, lighter, metal cup, tea or drink packets.

Even indoors, there are some cold-weather health hazards to watch out for. More people come down with colds and the flu as activities move indoors for the winter. Avoid missing out on winter fun by washing your hands frequently, not sharing food or utensils, and getting your flu vaccine. Eat healthy foods and get enough rest to boost your immune system. If you sweat, change into dry clothes, and try to layer for the conditions. Above all, get out and safely enjoy our beautiful country that most people only dream of seeing. Take part in the Winter Games at the Sports Center, ice fish, watch Auroras.
